

Heading north in a Land Cruiser, photographer Bill Bachman found an Australian outback full of contradictions. As his extraordinary photographs show, his is a very different view. The pictures are sometimes startling, sometimes zany, often astonishingly beautiful. At first it was the vast foregrounds, the empty horizons and enormous skies that captured the photographer's eye. Before long, the big picture began to break into smaller frames -- slabs of colour, slices of light... Bachman shows that the Australian landscape is as much about shape and texture as about space and distance. Photographer/journalist Bill Bachmann is widely known for his ski photography and writing. His work features in a vast number of Australian and international publications. Many of the photographs in this book were included in his one-man exhibitions at the Kodak Gallery in Sydney and Reflections Gallery in Melbourne.
