

Faith is involved in a bus accident in which she is severely injured and loses part of her memory. While lying injured, she is picked up by the leader of a religious cult who takes her to his compound, a farm called Genesis. As her health improves, she is put to work on this farm with other workers. She has no idea who she is or where she has come from. But she knows she does not belong in such a place and rebels from the strange practices she is forced to endure. Her rebellious nature sees her being tortured and imprisoned. She is given to one of the sons of the leader of the cult who had his own reasons for staying on at Genesis. Faith eventually escapes and returns to a place she believes is her home. However any reunion with her family is not going to be easy because of her memory loss. There is a detective who takes a keen interest in her and interrogates her about where she had been for all these years. Faith now has to face the reality of trying to integrate back into society and to come to terms with her new memories.
