

On 25 April, the deadliest day in Everest's history, an earthquake measuring 7.8 on the Richter scale killed 19 on the mountain and decimated thousands of livelihoods across Nepal. In the days that followed, aftershocks caused further destruction, and claimed more lives. In total, 8,800 people died, and more than 23,000 were injured. From the eerie wastes of the world's highest mountain, to the panic, pain and chaos of the villages and towns below, Alex Perry pieces together the story of the day the great mountain shook its bones.
